Governor's Office Announces New Sutter Health Facility to Employ Over 1000 Californians California Attracts Major Expansion

SACRAMENTO – Governor Brown's Senior Advisor on jobs and business development Mike Rossi today announced that Sutter Health will establish a major administrative service center in Roseville to support the network's Northern California health care operations. The center is expected to employ more than 1,000 administrative support staff over the next 18 months. The center's workforce is expected to grow more over time.

"The new Sutter Health facility will provide a wide array of high quality jobs for the region's workers," said Mike Rossi. "Sutter Health's decision to establish their new administrative service center in California is a result of the state's strengthening economy and the access to a highly skilled workforce."

Although Sutter Health considered multiple locations for its center, the health care system cited the proximity to affordable housing for staff, the Sacramento region's top colleges and universities and the skilled talent pools they provide as key factors that influenced the selection of Roseville, Calif.

Sutter-affiliated hospitals and facilities are regional leaders in cardiac and cancer care, women's and children's services, orthopedics, and advanced patient safety technology. This expansion is in addition to other major ventures Sutter is undergoing and brings the current capital investment in the Sacramento Region to nearly $1.7 billion. This will bring the company's overall presence to over 100 facilities and 48,000 employees statewide.

"Sutter Health is one of Northern California's largest employers, and we've been a key part of the region's economy and health care delivery system for nearly a century," said Sutter Health President and CEO Pat Fry. "The selection of Roseville for our service center represents another significant long-term commitment to support and grow with Northern California."

Scheduled to open in early 2013, the center will be located in a 300,000-square-foot office building at 9100 Foothills Boulevard, near Highway 65 and Blue Oaks Boulevard in west Roseville. Tenant improvements will begin immediately, and the first group of 200-300 employees will move into the facility in the first quarter of 2013. Additional employees will move to the center in phases.

Sutter Health doctors and hospitals serve more than 100 Northern California cities and towns with ambulatory, acute care, home health and other services. Sutter Health's system offices will remain in Sacramento.

The project enlisted the assistance of many partners at both the state and local levels. GO-Biz collaborated with the Sacramento Area Commerce and Trade Organization (SACTO) and the City of Roseville for several months to work with Sutter and ensure the project was delivered to California.
